Methodist Spirituality and Retreats

At the heart of Orthodox Christian spirituality is the invitation by grace for a person to live out, fully and radiantly what it means to be made after the image & likeness of God. This invitation can seem daunting, indeed scary, and yet as the Orthodox Fathers and Mothers sought to show, it was a wholly realistic prospect. This retreat will provide an opportunity to explore this invitation through the inspiring lives of particular saints and the very practical ways they responded to this invitation, slowly allowing themselves to be changed in prayer and in love, in their lives and their communities.

Nicholas Colloff is presently the director of a philanthropic foundation working on poverty in Africa and Latin America. He has led retreats with a wide range of audiences from Dominican Contemplative nuns in Hollywood, to first time retreatants and most recently for the World Community for Christian Meditation.

This Retreat is currently fully booked, but if you would like your name to be placed on a waiting list, please contact Sarah Leeson at sarahleeson2@outlook.com
